RESOURCE GUIDE

Introduction

Spirituality and sexuality are intricately connected, infinitely complex, and both are gifts from God. In the second commandment, Jesus taught us to love our neighbors as ourselves (Mark 12:3). Among people—particularly in faith communities—no other topic provokes such heated debate as sex, sexual orientation, and gender identity. Many adopt a “don’t ask, don’t tell” attitude regarding this subject in both teaching and practice.

Resources are being developed by The Episcopal Church (TEC) to offer ways to discuss the often “taboo” subjects of sex, sexuality, spirituality, and the impact of The Episcopal Church’s position on the theology of marriage on faith and sexuality. These resources often take the form of foundation books, program modules, and manuals (e.g., These Are Our Bodies). We believe that by drawing upon the rich resources of Christian contemplative tradition, there is a way to influence one’s own interior life and spiritual practice for this topic and be able to personally connect through “holy listening.”

As we spread the good news of the Gospel, we envision this tent for our neighbors as both deep and broad, including all—irrespective of gender, ethnicity, sexuality, class, age, culture, country of origin, or ability. Contemplative spiritual direction is a way in for everyone to discuss issues of faith and sexuality, all grounded in God’s grace and love. To that end, we have developed a workbook for spiritual directors, seminarians, clergy, lay leaders, and community partners. The development of the workbook has been funded by the Episcopal Evangelism Society (EES) and the William S. Conant Fund.

Jesus declares, “Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest” (Matthew 11:28 KJV). Join us as we engage in healthy and honest discussions around spirituality and sexuality. We will not attempt to convince one another to adopt any view but rather offer a safe and sacred space to share knowledge, and to engage in open and honest dialogue. This workbook will offer support to enter into your own interior life by providing guided meditation and prayer, journaling exercises, periods of silence and reflection, education, and resources. The workbook may be used individually, in small group discussions, or as a one day retreat.

It is our hope that through pertinent prayer and an open heart, you will engage in this vulnerable journey to discussing sexuality and spiritually with those we love.

May the mystery of your sexuality continue to be a gift from God.

RESOURCE GUIDE

Title: A Contemplative Approach to Spirituality and Sexuality

Authors: Dr. Westina Matthews, Adjunct Professor, Center for Christian Spirituality, General Theological Seminary.
The Rev. Dr. Tommie Watkins, Rector, St. Andrews Episcopal Church, Birmingham, Alabama.

Description

A Contemplative Approach to Spirituality and Sexuality is a dynamic, contemplative approach which draws upon the rich resources of Christian contemplative tradition to influence one's own interior life and spiritual practice to address issues of sexuality, sexuality orientation, and spirituality. This workbook is offered in a format to enhance the capacity of participants (spiritual directors, clergy, lay leaders, community partners, parishioners, etc.) to discuss issues of faith and sexuality. The outline provides: guided meditation and prayer; journaling exercises; periods of silence and reflection; education; interactive sharing; group spiritual direction; additional resources; and suggested formats for delivery.

This workbook was field tested as a one-day retreat for parishioners and the community at Trinity Wall Street, New York, NY in October 2016, offered as a three-day practicum (2017), and a seven-week online course for seminarians (2018) at General Theological Seminary, New York, NY. In August 2018, the materials also were presented in a one-day workshop at El Seminario Episcopal Anglicano of El Salvador.

Theological Premise

This resource provides a healthy alternative to didactic teaching which tells others what we believe is truth; and will allow participants to work within God's parameters to create the change of heart needed to see all persons as equal. The workbook provides a unique opportunity, maybe for the first time, for persons to address issues of sexuality and spirituality irrespective of one's own sexual orientation. We believe that this enterprise offers a non-threatening environment and process to work towards overcoming a very visible and salient barrier attributed to issues of sexuality, which can allow one to achieve wholeness and wholesome reconciliation as evidenced by inclusion and diversity for all of God's children.

Goals

- To introduce and facilitate open and frank conversation about sexuality using guidelines and principles of spiritual direction (e.g., examining resistance, "holy listening," integrating pastoral care, etc.).
- To educate, discuss, and provide accurate definitions of sex, sexualities, and gender identification.
- To provide innovative practical tools for Christian leaders (clergy, lay, community, spiritual directors) to facilitate healthy and holistic conversations around faith and sexuality.

Target Audience: Adults

The workbook may be used by individuals, in small or larger groups with adults. Gender diversity is encouraged, including LBGQT+ and cisgender if possible and appropriate.

Delivery and Implementation

The workbook is available electronically with no cost.

Timing

The contents may be delivered in workshops, seminars, one-day or weekend retreats, or as adult forums (1 to 6 sessions). You may wish to introduce the workbook, and offer it as independent study over several weeks, reconvening after three weeks and then with a final session.

Suggested Language to Market

Gifts from God: Spirituality and Sexuality

Spirituality and sexuality are intricately connected and both are gifts from God. Among people—particularly in faith communities—no other topic provokes such heated debate as sex, sexual orientation, and gender identity. Join us as we engage in healthy and honest discussions around spirituality and sexuality. We will not attempt to convince one another to adopt any view but rather offer a safe and sacred space to share knowledge, and to engage in open and honest dialogue. This contemplative approach will offer support to enter into your own interior life by providing guided meditation and prayer, journaling exercises, periods of silence and reflection, education, interactive sharing, and resources.

Design and Flow

While the time together will be full of rich content, there may not be sufficient time to cover the entire content of the workbook. Allow time for moments of contemplative pause to deepen the time together. Encourage attendees to complete the workbook on their own.

We encourage you to use music, a candle, a singing bowl, essential oils, and any other contemplative practices which will help the group to center and thereby creating a safe and sacred space for conversation.

A flipchart with markers will be needed, as well as pencils and pens. Because attendees will be journaling, you may wish for them to be seated at small round tables. Another seating possibility is to have everyone in a semi-circle with chairs for easy moving into small group discussions; with spaces available for individuals to go off to journal alone.

You may choose to offer this in one hour sessions. Because there will not be sufficient time to cover the entire content of the workbook in an hour setting, we suggest you offer a six-part series (one hour each). Rather than distribute the entire notebook, you may wish to photocopy only the exercises for that particular session. During each session, allow time for moments of contemplative pause to deepen the time together. Encourage attendees to continue on their own between sessions.

Journaling Guidelines

Participants may wish to write in this workbook, copy pages and write on the copies, or write in their own personal journals. Encourage participants to use whatever is their spiritual practice and what is most comfortable for them. If there is large or small group discussion, remind participants that they should only share that which they wish to share and how the Holy Spirit moves them.

Evaluation

A suggested evaluation is provided which can be distributed at the end of the retreat or forum, or you may wish to send electronically to be completed. In order to encourage honest and candid feedback, we recommend that the evaluations be anonymous.

THE REV. DR. TOMMIE LEE WATKINS JR., is the Rector at St. Andrews Episcopal Church, Birmingham, Alabama. Previously, he was the Associate Rector and Assistant Chaplain at Canterbury Chapel, Tuscaloosa Alabama, and an Adjunct Professor at the University of Alabama School of Social Work. Rev. Watkins also is a spiritual director, behavioral scientist, social worker, former mathematics professor and commercial pilot. He earned his MSW from the University of Alabama, his PhD in the School of Health, University of Alabama, and his M.Div. from The General Theological Seminary of the Episcopal Church. He is the author of Living Out Loud in which he shares his struggle of self-acceptance as an openly gay clergy.
